Description

The election calculator is a tool designed to help citizens compare their personal political views to those of political parties and individuals (e.g. legislators or election candidates) to see how well they align, and subsequently, to help cast their vote. The tool consists of two parts:

- A voting inventory that compares citizens' answers with real votes in the legislature from a previous election; and
- An opinion test which matches citizens' answers to the answers provided by the political parties or candidates.

Benefits

The calculator helps citizens make an informed decision and is helpful for European, presidential, parliamentary, regional and municipal elections.

How open data is used

The source code that the election calculator uses is a combination of own work and from polls of ZDF (Zweites Deutschen Fernsehen). This is published under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 license.
