Description

La Bonne Boite is a website for job applicants to get in touch with companies that are regularly, or currently, recruiting. In doing so, the website aims to tackle unemployment and provide access to information that job seekers typically do not have, but are in the hands of the recruiting firms.

Benefits

Users can filter results on the basis of the profession they are interested in and the region they intend to work in. The results reveal companies that have a high probability of hiring over the next 6 months. The website also provides advice for job applicants, such as which business are best to target, how to personalise their search, who best to contact within a company or organisation, and general resume tips.

How open data is used

La Bonne Boite analyses millions of recruitments datapoints from French companies. Its API fetches a list of companies that are labelled as potential hirers for a given profession (ROME code) and / or activity (NAF code), for a given location.
