Description

Dublinked is the open data portal for the city of Dublin. On the website, users can download data on, among others, transport, energy and the environment, public health and recreation. However, Dublinked only provides plain datasets and therefore DublinDashboard was founded. The Dashboard uses the data from Dublinked, but also from other open data sources (Eurostat, Central Statistics Office), to make visualisations that are easily understandable for its citizens. For example, it shows the air quality of several places on the map of Dublin.

Benefits

The DublinDashboard provides citizens, public sector workers, and companies with real-time information and interactive maps about various aspects of the city.

How open data is used

DublinDashboard uses open data from the open data portal of Dublin and combines this with other open data sources, such as Eurostat and Central Statistics Office.
