Description

European Statistical Systems (ESS) is a website that acts as a single-entry point to information on the organisations of the ESS and activities of its partners. The ESS is a partnership between the statistical authority of the European Union (Eurostat), the national statistical institutes (NSIs) across Europe, national authorities responsible for the development, production and dissemination of European statistics in EU Member States and the European Economic Area (EEA) and EFTA countries.

Benefits

ESS is free of charge and functions as a network for users to find statistics for national (country level) or EU purposes in policy areas.

How open data is used

The ESS uses open data from EU Member States, EEA and EFTA countries, primarily about EU policy areas. This open data is, for example, published as reports, i.e. the Statistical Yearbook of Ireland 2019.
