Description

The Museo Nacional Sofia de Madrid has opened an online platform due to the COVID-19 pandemic in Spain. The curators provide online content through a multimedia section, with numerous videos and audio pieces from the Museo's programme of exhibitions and activities, and the microsites Rethinking Guernica and RRS – Museo Reina Sofía Radio. The audio and video content includes expert speakers and discussion groups.

Benefits

- Online visitors can see famous artworks and enjoy art from their home.
- The initiative also promotes contemporary and modern art through online visibility.
- European citizens can bond over our communal art heritage through online commenting on the online content of the museum.

Collection

Collection 1
The Irruption of the 20th Century: Utopias and Conflicts
(1900-1945)

Collection 2
Is the War Over? Art in a Divided World
(1945-1968)

How open data is used

Cultural open data is uploaded in the form of high-resolution images of art through the online database. Thereby, the museum offers many audio and video content. The museum provides a data platform for sharing information and images about art works with their employees, visitors and other public museums.
