Description

Sud na Doloni, literally meaning “a court in the palm of your hand”. It is a Dnipro-based start-up that has launched an analytical service that lets users search, review and visualise court decisions. Users can access the service under free or professional fee-based subscription. Sud na Doloni was established during the Open Data Challenge hosted in Ukraine and it currently one of the best know legal start-ups.

Benefits

-  Registers often contain errors or typos that complicate a manual search of the register. Sud na Doloni aggregates and refines such data, thereby offering a convenient and quick search capability.
-  Sud na Doloni is actively involved in development of the open data industry by offering journalists free access to the service

How open data is used

The service allows users to search among over 17 million court decisions owing to the opening of data of the Uniform State Register of Court Rulings since 2018 and their integration with information from other 14 open state registers. This number is constantly rising, as 20 to 60 thousand new court rulings are added to the service on a daily basis.
