Description

The Open Data Program from DigitalGlobe releases open imagery for select sudden onset major crisis events, including pre-event imagery, post-event imagery and a crowdsourced damage assessment.

Benefits

When crises occur, DigitalGlobe is committed to support the humanitarian community by providing critical and actionable information to assist response efforts.

How open data is used

Associated imagery and crowdsourcing layers are released into the public domain under a Creative Commons 4.0 license, allowing for rapid use and easy integration with existing humanitarian response technologies.
